MODULAR COURSES BY WORLD FAMOUS INTERNATIONAL CHEF'S AT EMU FACULTY OF TOURISM

Eastern Mediterranean University (EMU) Faculty of Tourism continues to increase the quality of theoretical and practical education during the current year, as in every year. The Gastronomy and Culinary Arts Program Modular Training, offered at EMU Tourism Faculty since the 2018-2019 Academic Year, was held with the participation of British Chef Richard O'Connell, German Chef Rene Klinkmüller, Italian chef Nicola Quarani and Turkish Chef H. Hazar Alici.

World-renowned chefs, who come together with the students of EMU, shared the recipes for Italian cuisine, à la carte cuisine, à la carte pasta and dessert dishes with the students, whilst at the same time, including recipes from the Southeastern Anatolian cuisine in their courses. Offering its students the opportunity to work in the most important organisations of the world, EMU Tourism Faculty continues to contribute to the development of its students with modular education. During the one-week training period, during which different cultural flavors were experimented on, different cooking techniques and important hints were shared. The students expressed their pleasure in receiving training from professional chefs.

Bringing Up Fully-equipped Graduates is Our Goal

EMU Tourism Faculty Dean Prof. Dr. Hasan Kılıç emphasized that according to the goals they set within the framework of the vision they created as the faculty with the strongest infrastructure in the country, they brought together the professional experts of the sector, both nationally and internationally, with the students, and that they work to ensure that the students graduate well-equipped. Emphasizing that quality in education is not a coincidence, Prof. Dr. Kılıç stated that staff, planning, experience and strong international connections bring quality and that quality means EMU. Prof. Dr. Kılıç conveyed his thanks to everyone who contributed to the realization of the aforesaid training.
